PROF. STEINERT TO LECTURE

In a Course at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Prof. M. Steinert received a letter from General DiCesola, president of the Metropolitan Museum of Arts of New York, yesterday in reference to the time of the arrival in New York of his collection of old musical instruments, which he is to make use of in his lecture at the Metropolitan museum on February 2, on "The Evolution of the Piano Forte," under the auspices of Columbia college. This will be the last lecture in the course in progress there.

A special platform is to be erected for the exhibition of the instruments.

The other lectures of the course are by Rev. William Adams Brown, who gave his first lecture January 5 on "The Beginning of Musical Instruments." The second lecture was delivered January 12 on "Primitive Wind and String Instruments." The third will be delivered this evening on "Musical Instruments in the Orient," and the fourth on January 26 on "Musical Instruments in Europe." This course by Dr. Brown is of interest to New Haven people, as he has been engaged to deliver the course in connection with the University chamber concerts in North Sheffield hall beginning next month.

Prof. Steinert's collection of old instruments, from which the modern grand piano has been developed, is perhaps the rarest and most valuable of any similar collection in the world. The renown which it acquired at the Vienna exposition and later at the Columbian exposition at Chicago has made its fame world-wide. Prof. Steinert has done much to make the name of New Haven known in the musical world.
